Eurocor: Large audience in Buenos Aires

Bonn life sciences company Eurocor holds a successful lunch symposium at the SOLACI congress in Argentina

Bonn, 11. August 2010 – The symposium on new prospects for the DIOR heart catheter at the SOLACI cardiology congress in South America attracted great attention to the Bonn life sciences company Eurocor among medical experts.

Leading scientists from Argentina, Mexico, Spain, the USA and Germany described their experience with the DIOR heart catheter by Eurocor. American physician Ron Waksman spoke of his experience during the Valentine Trial with the DIOR catheter which was launched on a global scale on Valentine's Day this year.

Other topics at the symposium looked at using the DIOR in diabetes patients and further on-going development of the technology.

"The 'drug-eluting-balloon' is one of the most promising devices for the interventional therapy of PAD. However, the present hype should be shored up by prospective randomized studies, as we have recently started with the FREEWAY balloon", said Prof. Dr. Karl-Ludwig Schulte from Berlin's Charitè hospital.

"This symposium has once again illustrated how well medical experts respond to our DIOR and how happy physicians are to work with these devices", is the pleased reaction from Katja Hausner, Director Corporate Business Affairs at Eurocor.
